Striptease acts restricted to industrial zones

Council turns down burlesque performance group's request for flexibility on venues

MARCO VIGLIOTTI
marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

The operator of a Regina-based burlesque performance group is urging city council to follow Saskatoon's lead and allow licensed establishments, other than only strip clubs in industrial districts, to host strip shows a few times each month.

But on Thursday, council voted to move forward with a plan to prohibit licensed venues — other than newly legalized strip clubs — from occasionally holding adult entertainment, including burlesque shows.

Councillors, however, did back a motion from Coun. Shawn Fraser tasking administrators with preparing a report in the next three months on how Saskatoon is faring with its regulatory system, which permits other licensed establishments to host striptease performances up to twice each calendar month.

"A lot of people just weren't aware that there are performance groups out there that would be affected by … how the bylaw is reading," Beve Gardner, artistic director with the Bottoms Up Burlesque Club, said after Regina's council passed the motion.

Under Regina's regulations, the only establishments where the burlesque group is allowed to perform and have alcohol served are strip clubs restricted to industrial areas.

Coun. Jerry Flegel urged his colleagues to back a system that would allow the burlesque club to perform at other licensed venues.

A temporary permit system for venues would be another workable option, Gardner said.

Unlike striptease performances, Gardner explained, burlesque is a traditional artistic singing and dancing style that has seen a resurgence during the past decade. The focus of the shows, she said, is much more on a theatrical element than on stripping.

As a result, the group is not seeking to arrange shows at bars or nightclubs, but rather at facilities with theatrical stages such as Conexus Arts Centre.

House explosion sends 3 to hospital

Three people were taken to a Regina hospital on Thursday evening after an explosion at a house in the North Central district. Gerard Kay, the city's deputy fire chief, confirmed on Twitter that the blast and resulting blaze caused extensive damage to the basement of the structure on the 800-block of Elphinstone Street. Seriously injured

Preliminary hearing set for three Roughriders charged in bar fight

Three players with the Saskatchewan Roughriders football club charged with aggravated assault will face a preliminary hearing in June.

The hearing in Regina provincial court is set for June 11 and 12 for defensive back Dwight Anderson, wide receiver Taj Smith and wide receiver Eron Riley.

They were charged after a man was seriously injured in a bar fight in Regina last August.

Preliminary hearings determine whether there is enough evidence to send cases to trial.

This case will next be spoken to in court on May 2.

Sask. gears up for annual Telemiracle

Regina is preparing for Saskatchewan's 38th annual Telemiracle telethon this weekend.

Telemiracle, a live televised event that raises money for people with special needs, will be held in Regina on Saturday and Sunday at Conexus Arts Centre.

Last year, Telemiracle raised $5.5 million.

"It's always great to beat that goal, but we just always hope to make as much as we possibly can," said Telemiracle chairman Clint Shkuratoff.

Fundraisers including costume parties and bed-pushing events from Saskatoon to Regina have been held across the province in anticipation of the telethon. Money raised through Telemiracle will go toward wheelchairs, meals, hospital equipment, travel for medical check-ups and the like. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Turning to online fundraising to try to save historic school

Connaught. Regina mom hopes to raise $10K to repair 102-year-old building's front steps, wall bracing

SARAH TAGUIAM
sarah.taguiam@metronews.ca

A Regina parent has taken the matter of saving Connaught Community School into her own hands.

Kate Smart recently launched an online crowdfunding campaign on Indiegogo, seeking to raise $10,000 to repair the 102-year-old building's front steps and wall bracing.

According to an engineering report commissioned by Regina Public Schools, the repairs would keep the school open until 2015 instead of closing in June because it's "at the end of its safe and useful life." However, they would cost a total of $20,000.

"I couldn't believe that it's such a small amount and they're so quick to close the school," said Smart, who bought a house near Connaught in the Cathedral area so she could eventually send her kids there.

The public board is waiting for the provincial government's approval to construct a school to replace Connaught.

If Connaught closes for the next school year, most of its students would be sent by bus to other schools.

"Busing would cost $1,400 per child per year and would be way more expensive than repairs," Smart told Metro.

Regina Public Schools is waiting to hear from all parents and guardians about other options before taking a firm position. Surveys have been issued with answers expected by March 20.

"When we receive all that information, we'll be in a better position to make decisions and comments on what options are available," said board spokesman Terry Lazarou.

Kate Smart has started an online campaign to raise money that will go toward repairing and keeping Connaught Community School open for at least one more year. Smart hopes to send her daughter Bronwyn, 3, to the school. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Two days into Smart's campaign, it has raised more than $1,000.

"We're hoping the board matches the $10,000 that we raise," Smart said.

"Our hearts are in this community and we want to keep our kids here."

‘I want to be part of this world’

Crowdsourcing. At 600 pounds, 21-year-old is hoping to raise $30K to cover costs of surgery to cut weight in half

MORGAN MODJESKI
Metro in Saskatoon

Unable to drive, work or sleep through the night, a morbidly obese Saskatoon man wants to change his life.

Luke Deitner, 21, weighs about 600 pounds. And he’s hoping to raise $30,000 for a surgery that could cut his girth in half.

“For so long now, it seems the world has just spun around me and I’ve just stayed in one spot — and I don’t want that to happen,” Deitner told Metro on Thursday, noting the effects of his size and weight in severely limiting his mobility and stamina.

“I want to be part of this world.”

Overweight since childhood, Deitner has been ridiculed almost all of his life. He hardly leaves his home these days, also out of fear of being judged.

“Having to deal with social prejudice also plays a huge role in why I choose to stay home a lot of the time,” he said.

“People have gone as far to pull over their vehicles to shout names at me for … a chuckle. Things like that have stuck with me for my entire life.”

With friend Tess Boehm, he has set up an online crowdfunding campaign to raise money for a bariatric procedure in Montreal that would shrink his stomach substantially. He’s too large to have the surgery in Saskatchewan.

The stigma, Boehm said, makes obesity extremely difficult.

Life-saving surgery

To donate funds for Deitner’s surgery, visit gofundme.com/71316s

Luke Deitner, seen here at his home in Saskatoon, says he’s tired of letting the world pass him by because of his obesity. He’s raising funds for a surgery that could cut his 600-pound weight in half — and save his life. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

“People forget that obesity is a disease,” she said. “If you’re an alcoholic, they send you to a treatment centre. If you’re a meth addict, they send you to a clinic. But if you’re obese, you’re laughed at.”

A Montreal surgeon is in the early stages of preparing an operation plan to send to Saskatchewan Health in hopes of having the surgery’s cost covered, Boehm said.

If the Saskatchewan government pays for the surgery, Deitner and Boehm will reduce their fundraising goal. It’s likely that Deitner would still have to cover costs for travel and accommodation.

Saskatoon advocate joins protest against horse cull

Bunnie Harasym of Paradise Stable Horse Rescue is seen with Levis, one of the many rescued horses at her sanctuary. Harasym has made three trips to Alberta to protest the cull of wild horses. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

For many across Canada, the culling of Alberta’s wild horses in the province’s southwest is a sad news story. But for one Saskatoon woman, it’s a call to action.

Bunnie Harasym, of Paradise Stable Horse Rescue west of Saskatoon, has made three trips to Alberta in the past month to join activists as they attempt to hinder the cull.

“It’s heartbreaking,” said Harasym, who returned from her most recent trip on Monday, a day before five protesters were arrested.

“You’re watching them and just hoping that … favourite horse that you saw is not in the capture pen … it’s really emotionally draining.”

The Alberta government has issued 200 permits to capture the animals numbering more than 980, saying they negatively impact livestock, animals and plant life.

Though snares and firearms are prohibited, advocates say the practice is hard on the animals because those with permits use capture pens loaded with food. Once the horses are inside, a trip wire causes the door to close — an experience Harasym calls “terrifying” for them.

But Krissy Fiddler, executive director of the Saskatchewan Horse Federation, said the practice is necessary to ensure a healthy herd.

“It is definitely humane to take care of these animals when they can’t take care of themselves,” Fiddler said. “It takes 30 days for a horse to starve and die, and we as advocates of health and welfare (for) these animals need to make sure they don’t get to that point.”

Alberta’s capture season started in November and will end on Saturday.

Same-sex marriage.
Kentucky the latest win for gay rights advocates

A federal judge signed an order Thursday directing officials in Kentucky to immediately recognize same-sex marriages performed in other states and countries, capping a hectic 24 hours in the battle over gay rights that is raging across the U.S.

The Kentucky decision was just the latest victory for gay rights advocates.

A federal judge on Wednesday declared a same-sex marriage ban in deeply conservative Texas unconstitutional, handing same-sex marriage proponents their biggest victory yet, pending an appeal that will likely go to the U.S. Supreme Court.

It followed similar recent decisions in Utah, Oklahoma and Virginia.

Kentucky's ruling Thursday only requires the state to recognize the marriages of gay and lesbian couples performed in other states or countries.

Rehearsal for invasion?

North Korea launches missiles in protest, say officials

North Korea fired four suspected short-range missiles into its eastern waters Thursday, South Korean defence officials said, in an apparent effort to protest ongoing U.S.-South Korean military exercises that Pyongyang calls a rehearsal for invasion.

The launches, however, weren't expected to raise tension as North Korea routinely tests short-range missiles and it has recently sought better ties with South Korea in what outside analysts say is an attempt to win badly-needed foreign investment and aid.

Blow to the bank.
Tensions have caused the country's finances to plummet, prompting a potential emergency financial package

Masked gunmen stormed parliament in Ukraine's strategic Crimea region Thursday as Russian fighter jets scrambled to patrol borders, while the newly formed government pledged to prevent a national breakup with strong backing from the West — the stirrings of a potentially dangerous confrontation reminiscent of Cold War brinksmanship.

Moscow granted shelter to Ukraine's fugitive president, Viktor Yanukovych, state media said. He was said to be holed up in a luxury government retreat and to have scheduled a news conference Friday near the Ukrainian border.

As gunmen wearing unmarked camouflage uniforms erected a sign reading "Crimea is Russia" in the provincial capital, Ukraine's interim prime minister declared the Black Sea territory "has been and will be a part of Ukraine."

The escalating conflict sent Ukraine's finances plummeting further, prompting Western leaders to prepare an emergency financial package.

Yanukovych, whose abandonment of closer ties to Europe in favour of a bailout loan from Russia set off three months of protests, finally fled by helicopter last week as his allies deserted him. The humiliating exit was a severe blow to Russian President Vladimir Putin, who had been celebrating his signature Olympics even as Ukraine's drama came to a head. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Greyhound killer allowed to leave hospital unescorted

Vince Li. Board grants man who beheaded fellow passenger on Manitoba bus freedom to travel to nearby town without supervision

Not convinced

"He poses no threat in care. I propose they keep him in care so he's not a threat."

Carol DeDelley, mother of victim Tim McLean, who says there is no way to guarantee that Vince Li will continue to take his medication if he's unsupervised.

A man who beheaded a fellow passenger on a Greyhound bus in Manitoba will soon be allowed to leave a mental hospital without an escort.

Thursday's ruling by the Criminal Code Review Board means Vince Li will be on his own in public for the first time since he stabbed Tim McLean and then ate parts of his body six years ago.

The board granted Li all the new freedoms his psychiatric team had requested at a hearing earlier this week. Lead psychiatrist Dr. Steven Kremer said Li, a schizophrenic, has stopped experiencing delusions and is a non-violent patient.

Instead of the supervised outings Li had been granted previously, he will be allowed unescorted trips from the Selkirk Mental Health Centre into the nearby city of Selkirk. The visits, to begin next Thursday, are to start at 30 minutes and increase to full days.

As well, Li's supervision on outings to other communities — including Winnipeg — will be relaxed. He is to be part of a group without a staff member dedicated to monitoring him.

Li is also to be moved to an unlocked ward at the hospital from the secure wing where he has been kept.

For McLean's mother, the changes were an outrage.

"We're not surprised. We're very disappointed, embarrassed, ashamed," Carol DeDelley said.

"I ultimately do not believe that when you take a life, you have the right to freedom any longer." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Egypt. Supporters rally for release of Canadian journalist and colleagues

Members of the Canadian media and the public joined an international day of action Thursday to demand the release of several Al Jazeera journalists, including an Egyptian-Canadian, who are imprisoned in Cairo.

Canadian Mohamed Fahmy and his colleagues — Australian Peter Greste and Egyptian Baher Mohamed — were detained on Dec. 29, and are being tried on charges of belonging to and aiding a terrorist organization.

Their arrests were characterized as part of a crackdown on the Muslim Brotherhood, an Islamist group that Egypt's government has branded a terrorist organization.

Local authorities have said Al Jazeera is biased towards the Brotherhood — an allegation the broadcaster has denied.

At a rally in Toronto, journalists and concerned citizens braved frigid temperatures to send a message that journalism is not a crime.

"They are reporters, producers, journalists and they've been put in jail for doing their jobs. It's unjust," Tom Henheffer, executive director of the Canadian Journalists for Free Expression, said at a rally in Toronto.

A journalist covers her mouth in Beirut, Lebanon, Thursday, to show solidarity with journalists, including Canadian Mohamed Fahmy, who are detained by Egyptian authorities.

"It's crucial that we gather for one of our fellow Canadians and fight to get him out of prison."

Journalists and free speech advocates, some with masking tape stuck across their mouths, gathered in centres in other countries as well, including London's Trafalgar Square, Lebanon's Martyrs' Square and in Kenya's capital, Nairobi.

Canada agrees to prevent fishing in Arctic Ocean

Canada and four other Arctic nations have agreed to work toward a deal to block commercial fishing in the central Arctic Ocean until more is known about the potential of the resource.

The agreement with the U.S., Russia, Denmark and Norway was reached Wednesday in Nuuk, Greenland, after three days of talks.

"The participants recognized the need for interim precautionary measures to prevent any future commercial fisheries without the prior establishment of appropriate regulatory mechanisms," said a news release issued from Nuuk.

"The participants will work toward the establishment of such interim measures."

The five Arctic coastal nations each regulate fishing up to 200 nautical miles from their shores, but that leaves a large regulatory hole in the central Arctic Ocean.

Three-parent embryos. U.K. holds public review of controversial fertilization technique

Britain is inviting the public to weigh in on draft rules allowing scientists to create embryos using DNA from three people — a man and two women — to prevent mothers from passing on potentially fatal genetic diseases.

The latest public review should be the last step before politicians consider changing the law to let doctors offer the new fertilization techniques to patients. That would make Britain the first country in the world to allow the procedure to help people have children.

Genetic alteration

"[This] is an important step for society and should not be taken lightly."

Dr. Peter Braude, emeritus professor of obstetrics and gynecology at King's College London

The public input isn't meant to debate whether the controversial techniques should be permitted. Instead, it concerns how they should be used to prevent relatively rare diseases caused by DNA defects in parts of the cell called mitochondria. Mistakes in the mitochondria's genetic code can result in diseases such as muscular dystrophy, epilepsy, heart problems and mental handicaps.

Mitochondria are energy-producing structures outside the cell's nucleus. The new techniques involve removing the nucleus DNA from the egg of a prospective mother and inserting it into a donor egg, from which the nucleus DNA has been removed. That happens either before or after fertilization.

The resulting child ends up with the nucleus DNA from its parents, but the mitochondrial DNA from the donor. Scientists say the DNA from the donor egg amounts to less than one per cent of the resulting embryo's genes. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OPTIC NERVE hits a nerve

1.8M

The video communications of about 1.8 million users had been hacked by the GCHQ in a six-month period in 2008, according to the report by the Guardian.

Britain's signals intelligence division is stealing screenshots from hundreds of thousands of innocent Yahoo users' webcam videos, according to the Guardian newspaper, which also reported that the years-long operation has swept up a huge haul of intimate photographs.

The newspaper said GCHQ has been scooping up the sensitive images by intercepting video chats such as the kind offered by Yahoo Messenger, an effort codenamed OPTIC NERVE. It's not clear how many Yahoo users were spied on in this way. The Guardian said that in one six-month period in 2008, GCHQ intercepted the video communications of 1.8 million users, but it's possible that the program, which the Guardian says was still active in 2012, has either grown or shrunk in scope since then.

If the program expanded, millions more could have had their video communications intercepted. Yahoo Messenger had 75 million users worldwide in late 2011, according to an estimate by digital analytics company comScore, although numbers have fallen steadily since then.

The Guardian said the documents were provided by former U.S. intelligence worker Edward Snowden, who remains in Russia after having sought temporary asylum there.

If confirmed, the newspaper's report would represent "a whole new level of violation of our users' privacy," Yahoo Inc. said in a written statement. The Sunnyvale, Calif.-based company said it was unaware of such snooping and would never condone it, calling on governments across the world to reform their surveillance practices.

Like the NSA's collection of millions of innocent people's phone, email, and credit card data, the webcam surveillance program was carried out in bulk, creating a massive database where the communications of hundreds of thousands of people could later be scanned by analysts for clues or patterns. HASHTAG HOPES FOR SPRING

THE METRO LIST

metronews.ca

1 Piers Morgan. Social media went nuts this week when it was announced CNN was ending Piers Morgan's show next month due to poor ratings. The majority seemed fully in support of the decision to axe the show. I for one find his interview style refreshing and transparent, and his ranting on gun control laws — while tiring to some — bang on. I say move Anderson Cooper into the 9 p.m. slot now.

2 #PinkShirtDay #StopBullying. People standing up to bullies — while wearing pink — was trending across Canada this week in a beautiful show of solidarity against bullying on Pink Shirt Day on Wednesday. Whether it's in the schoolyard, home, workplace or online, we all know someone who has been bullied. The more awareness (and action) on this social issue, the better.

3 Harold Ramis. The world of comedy lost a gem — his writing classics included Animal House and Groundhog Day — when he passed away at the age of 69, and online tributes flowed in. It's his co-starring role in the Ghostbuster movies he'll likely be most remembered for. Indeed, a Twitter picture showing a tribute to him outside the Ghostbusters firehouse in Tribeca (Twinkie included!) was shared all over the interwebs.

4 AC/DC symphony. It's perhaps the best mashup of classical music meets classic rock ever: Croatian string duo 2Cellos did an amazing cover of AC/DC's Thunderstruck, performed in full period setting. It has four million views on YouTube. I want more. I want the 2Cellos to do Stairway to Heaven, Bohemian Rhapsody, Sweet Child O'Mine and Smells Like Teen Spirit. Shake me all night long with that.

5 #WeAreSpring, please. #WeAreWinter was a fantastic, empowering promo for the Canadian Olympic team during the Winter Olympics but that's over (and we did amazing!), yet the frigid temperatures still remain. I can speak for everyone when I say we are kinda getting sick of shovelling. So I propose it's time to bring out a #WeAreSpring campaign where we encourage Mother Nature to show us some heat! Bring it with that hashtag.

6 Coldplay. With no context, Coldplay released an eerie, frosty, dark new video titled Midnight this week that felt more like a Radiohead song. But dropping stuff with zero context is the new I'm-going-to-build-so-much-hype-behind-this-product-before-it's-released-you-won't-believe-it! So it makes total sense, actually.

7 Anchorman 2. On Feb. 28, Anchorman 2: The Legend Continues is being re-released in theatres for one week only with 763 new jokes. A movie that had so much improvisation had plenty to choose from and these new ones have risen from the cutting room floor. So now, watch out on social media as movie-goers tweet out their fave new Ron Burgundy lines.

8 Oscars. With the 86th Academy Awards Sunday night, the biggest social media action will be on what returning host Ellen has to say in her opening monologue, and what the stars are wearing on the red carpet. The actual awards are secondary — though if Barkhad Abdi from Captain Phillips doesn't win best actor in a supporting role, I'll be kicking up a Twitter storm.

Batman stars in new toy story

COURTESY FREYA JOBBINS

Dark Knight's head made of recyclables

It looks like Batman has gone all soft – he's made out of toys. Sculptor Freya Jobbins created this bust of the Caped Crusader using old figurines, with a baby doll belly as his chin. "My work explores the relationship between consumerist fetishism and the emerging recycling culture within the visual arts," says Jobbins. METRO

Artist's viewpoint

"I begin my work by finding toys in second-hand shops and recycling centres. As I build a base layer of toys and doll parts, the persona of the bust starts to evolve." Freya Jobbins

So many items

- "I love the actual process of hunting for the discarded toys, but to find so many of them unwanted, still in perfectly good condition, really shocks me," Jobbins said.

Seth Rogen and his partner-in-crime Evan Goldberg's next announced project is a movie version of Console Wars, an upcoming book about the knock-down, drag-out brawl between Sega and Nintendo of the '90s. But there's no need to wait for either to refresh your memories of a pixelated rivalry.

Nesbox:
Brush up on the Nintendo side of the war by browsing through a playable library of NES and SNES games that is hundreds deep. Classic RPGs, beat-em-up brawlers and patience-grinding platformers. Not to mention the mighty and beloved Earthbound. (nesbox.com)

Ssega:
Look, fan boys. It's quite easy to love the offerings of both companies. There's no need for rival camps. However, as you're working your way through proven classics like Aladdin, Beyond Oasis and Sonic Spinball (that's right, Spinball), you'll find we can all agree that most of the music was terrible. (ssega.com)

The Console Wars:
If the games themselves cause your eyes to glaze over, there's still a magnificent yarn full of insider intrigue, corporate betrayal and tumbles from the throne. The full book is a few weeks away from release, but Exposé has a pretty great primer that may pique your interest. (xmedia.ex.ac.uk)

Synopsis

Liam Neeson joins the mile-high club in Non-Stop. He plays Bill Marks, an aging U.S. federal air marshal safe-guarding the 150 passengers, including Julianne Moore, Corey Stoll, Linus Roache and flight attendant Lupita Nyong'o, on an international flight from New York to London. He's also a burn-out, a lonely guy with a loaded gun and a propensity to get loaded on booze. The routine flight becomes fraught with danger when he receives text messages from a mysterious source threatening to kill a passenger every 20 minutes unless a ransom of $150 million is deposited into a bank account. When that account is discovered to be in Marks's name, he's accused of being a hijacker.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Just plane outrageous

Non-Stop. Liam Neeson's acting is the only thing that saves this from a crash landing

Richard: Mark, Non-Stop has more red herrings than a fish and chips shop. Clues are dropped and discarded and the plot is so ludicrous that every now and again someone has to say, "I can explain this," so the audience has a fighting chance of making some kind of sense of the intrigue. The story is simple but is muddied by outrageous twists. Once I decided to not try and play along — this isn't True Detective where every word and scene counts — I enjoyed watching Neeson in action man mode. He's better than the movie and he made this movie better simply by showing up.

Mark: Richard, I liked the movie in spite of itself. I did play along right to the end, and enjoyed the ride. But it's this Agatha Christie-like cheesiness that keeps threatening to sink the picture. And the answer to the movie's riddle was far from satisfying. It felt tacked on and graceless. Neeson is great, but he's getting so old for this sort of thing. Soon he's going to have to chase after the bad guys with a walker.

RC: You wouldn't say that if he was after you! Walker or no walker, the old boy has some life in him yet. There is a certain cheesy joy to be found in the image of Neeson floating in zero gravity, grabbing a gun out of the air and getting business done. He has carved a unique action niche for himself and seems to be having fun growling and gunning his way through trashy action movies.

MB: And what about Julianne Moore? What's her excuse? Mortgage payments? She was actually the one passenger I didn't believe in for a moment. I kept thinking, "Why is Julianne Moore in this picture?' And like everyone else, she gets to do an emotional speech that proves she couldn't be the villain. Which, of course, may or may not be the case. I know you liked Neeson's zero gravity gun grab, but I also liked his fist fight in the airplane lavatory. Shot in such close quarters, it was very exciting.

RC: I hope Moore buys something nice with the pay cheque. She gets the job done, but that part could have been played by anyone. I feel bad for Lupita Nyong'o. She's an Oscar nominee for 12 Years a Slave, but here she's reduced to a Grace Jones impersonator with just a few lines.

MB: Weirdly, I did not feel very emotionally involved with the movie. Maybe because so much of the plot depends on texting, or maybe because the characters keep yammering on, Non-Stop, about their backstory.

The man behind The Lion King looks at the dog life

Mr. Peabody & Sherman hits theatres next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

Mr. Peabody & Sherman. Rob Minkoff brings back a beagle he loved as a child and makes a smart, funny film in the process

Quoted

"I didn't want to copy (the TV show) exactly because I couldn't possibly do that. So it was taking the spirit of it and letting that be. Trying to get to the core of what it is rather than the surface."

Director Rob Minkoff on making a film based on Peabody's Improbable History

scene@metronews.ca

Rob Minkoff may always be best known as the co-director of The Lion King, one of the biggest animated hits of all time, but long before he brought Simba, Mufasa and Scar to life, he was a fan of a dog named Mr. Peabody.

Mr. Peabody is a beagle in the world of humans — imagine Family Guy's Brian with less attitude but more PhDs. He's a Harvard grad, a Nobel Prize winner, advisor to heads of state and in his spare time he invented planking and auto tune.

With his adopted human son Sherman, he's also a time traveller, taking the WABAC machine — "It's not WHERE we're going, but WHEN!" — to various spots in history in a weekly segment on the show Rocky and His Friends called Peabody's Improbable History.

"Whenever it came on, I would watch it," says Minkoff, director of the new animated film Mr. Peabody & Sherman, "so I've seen all the episodes multiple times.

"I was always a fan but I don't recall thinking, 'Oh, that would make a great movie one day.' It didn't occur to me that way. It all started 12 years ago with a conversation I had with (executive producer) Jason Clark. He came to me and said, 'What do you think of Mr. Peabody and Sherman?' My answer was, 'I love them.' He said, 'What about making a movie out of them.' I thought, 'They're great characters. There's a lot to them. There is an unexplored well of stuff, like the time machine and time travel.'"

That was 12 years ago. "Once you get your teeth into something creatively," he says, "you never really let go."

Over the years the idea for the film has shifted and changed. At the very early stages it was suggested that the movie could work as a live action story.

"It didn't take very long for me to come around to the idea that I would prefer to do this as an animated movie because I didn't understand how it would work as a live action thing. It would lose some of its appeal, some of the quirkiness of it."

The film retains the eccentricity of the original series: It's probably the only kid's movie with an Oedipal joke. But Minkoff hopes the movie will appeal to all ages.

"The original show was always popular among college educated, smarter people, and that was something we thought was important but at the same time, we wanted to) make it kid friendly.

"I didn't want to copy (the TV show) exactly because I couldn't possibly do that. So it was taking the spirit of it and letting that be. Trying to get to the core of what it is rather than the surface."

The end of the annual film calendar is nearly upon us, with the 86th Academy Awards set for Sunday evening on CTV and CTV.ca. Here's a sample of what to expect on Hollywood's biggest night.

Did you know

- Meryl Streep's nod for best actress in August: Osage County marks her 18th Oscar nomination, breaking the record for most nominations earned by an actor or actress, previously held by ... Meryl Streep.
- If Jennifer Lawrence wins for best supporting actress in American Hustle she'll become the youngest person to win two acting Oscars. She'd also be the first actress to win back-to-back awards in different categories and with the same director.
- This year marks only the second time that Pixar has released a film (Monsters University) that hasn't earned a best animated picture nomination. The first was 2011's Cars 2.
- Best actor nominee Leonardo DiCaprio and best actress nominee Amy Adams are currently tied at five career nominations and zero wins each.
- With his nomination for The Book Thief's soundtrack, John Williams extends his ridiculous lead as the living person with the most Oscar nods, at 49. If you factor in the deceased, he's catching up to 60-time nominee Walt Disney.
- Frozen composer Bobby Lopez, one of the songwriters nominated for best song favourite Let It Go, would become the 12th person in show business history to achieve the EGOT — winning an Emmy, a Grammy, an Oscar and a Tony.
- Ellen DeGeneres reprises her role as the ceremony's host, following her last turn at the gig in 2007. She's got a long way to go to get into the record books though, as Bob Hope holds the lead with 19 hosting appearances.

Your guide to the Oscars

86th Academy Awards.
Here's what to look out for during Sunday's ceremony, hosted by Ellen DeGeneres

Returning producers Neil Meron and Craig Zadan say the theme for this year's Oscars is a salute to heroes and heroines of all stripes, celebrating everything from Norma Rae and Captain Phillips to Harry Potter and the Ghostbusters. There will also be a segment celebrating the 75th anniversary of the Wizard of Oz.

Music will be a big part of the ceremony, which is great considering so many big names are nominated in the best song category and performances of the nominated songs were skipped altogether in 2010 and 2012.

U2 (Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom), Pharrell Williams (Despicable Me 2), Karen O (Her) and Idina Menzel (Frozen) will all take the stage, as will Pink and Bette Midler for other performances.

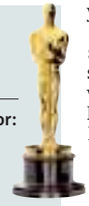
But host DeGeneres has already insisted that she herself won't be singing, unlike last year's host, Seth MacFarlane.

With 46 famous faces presenting, it's going to be a busy stage. Presenters include previous winners like Jennifer Lawrence, Christoph Waltz, Kevin Spacey and Angelina Jolie, plus popular names like Zac Efron, Channing Tatum and Kristen Bell. One we're excited about is Vertigo star Kim Novak, making a rare public appearance at the ceremony.

This marks the 13th year the Oscars have been presented in the same venue, though the name has changed. What was the Kodak Theatre up until 2011 is now known as the Dolby Theatre.

And if the ceremony feels long, just be thankful it's not 2000 anymore. That year, the proceedings clocked in at a whopping four hours and four minutes, while they generally average around three-and-a-half hours long. The first Oscars in 1929, by the way, lasted 15 minutes. If only.

Last-minute predictions



We're going ahead and calling most of the races all locked up, but there is still room for surprises. Best supporting actress and best picture seem particularly hard to pin down. But we're pinning them down anyway! If you win your office pool with this, we get a cut, OK?

- Best Picture: 12 Years a Slave
- Best Director: Alfonso Cuarón, Gravity
- Best Actor: Matthew McConaughey, Dallas Buyers Club
- Best Actress: Cate Blanchett, Blue Jasmine
- Best Supporting Actor: Jared Leto, Dallas Buyers Club
- Best Supporting Actress: Lupita Nyong'o, 12 Years a Slave
- Best Original Screenplay: Spike Jonze, Her
- Best Adapted Screenplay: John Ridley, 12 Years a Slave

- Best Original Score: Steven Price, Gravity

A few good reads

The books behind the films

If you're looking for some good reading material, the Academy's best adapted screenplay category is a good place to start, but you'll be searching bookstores in vain for the book behind Before Midnight. The screenplay for the movie is an adaptation because it's based on the characters from previous films Before Sunrise and Before Sunset. Still, you can always cozy up with these:

• A Captain's Duty: Somali Pirates, Navy SEALs and Dangerous Days at Sea, the book by Richard Phillips (with co-writer Stephan Talty) became Captain Phillips, with Tom Hanks stepping in to portray Phillips' hijacking by Somali pirates.

• The Lost Child of Philomena Lee by Martin Sixsmith obviously became Philomena, starring Dame Judi Dench as Lee and Steve Coogan as former BBC presenter Sixsmith.

• 12 Years a Slave, the harrowing 1853 memoir of Solomon Northup, was originally published with the subtitle "Narrative of Solomon Northup, citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington city in 1841, rescued in 1853 from a cotton plantation near the Red River in Louisiana," which, honestly, is a total spoiler.

• Reading Jordan Belfort's own accounts of his exploits in the memoir The Wolf of Wall Street might help illuminate why the film's chronicle of bad behavior seemed so infatuated with its subject, who earned a tidy $1 million for the movie rights.

• Over in the best documentary category, you can pick up Jeremy Scahill's Dirty Wars: The World is a Battlefield if you want to learn more about the nominated film Dirty Wars.

And the Oscar for best cocktail goes to ...

It's an unusually crowded field for this year's best picture contest, but thankfully our vice isn't gambling. Instead, we raise a glass to three of our favourite 2013 nominees. Serve these and everyone goes home a winner!

TEXT BY JOE HOWELL, PHOTOGRAPHY BY JOANNA BALCERAK

I'm the Captain Now

- 1 oz Captain Morgan Dark Rum
- 1 oz Sailor Jerry Spiced Navy Rum
- 4 oz ginger beer
- 3 lime wedges
- 2 dashes Angostura Bitters

Build in a Collins glass with ice.

We salute Captain Phillips with this take on a seaworthy classic, the Dark 'n' Stormy. Originally just rum and ginger beer, the drink hails from the heyday of the Royal Navy, when sailors got a daily ration of rum and the Navy opened a ginger beer plant in Bermuda, purportedly to wean those same sailors off the hard stuff. Of course, the scallywags just combined the two instead. Here, the legendary pirate Morgan and the venerable skipper Jerry fight for control of this tempestuous libation.

The Russian Satellite

- 1.5 oz Stolichnaya Vodka
- .75 oz Kahlúa
- .25 oz pure lemon juice
- 2 dashes Bittermens Xocolatl Mole Bitters
- 1 dash Fernet Branca
- White tapioca pearls

Shake and strain into a brandy snifter, pack with ice, and scatter pearls on top.

The famous Black Russian — simply vodka and Kahlúa — is older than the space station Mir before they finally decommissioned the space wreck. In this twist we hail Gravity: the cocktail is still sweet and likeable, but thanks to the lemon and Fernet has a bit of edge, like George Clooney in pretty much all his roles. As the tapioca pearls slowly drift toward the bottom of this inky drink (due to, you know, gravitation) they resemble little stars.

The Bamboozeler

- 1.5 oz pineapple juice
- 1 oz coconut cream
- .75 oz Appleton VX
- .75 oz Malibu Rum
- 75 oz Blue Curaçao
- .50 oz lime juice

Shake hard with ice and strain into a stemmed martini glass. Garnish with a homemade cocktail umbrella.

"I don't care, I break the rules," says Bradley Cooper in American Hustle. With its neon hue and garish garnish, this libation definitely disregards modern cocktail conventions. But in the era of Hustle, sexy, gaudy drinks were de rigueur. And just like Christian Bale in this caper, the concoction might look harmlessly ludicrous—but it'll take you for a ride.

Life as an A-list actress. From finding the right dress to erasing wrinkles and losing those extra pounds, getting Oscar-ready is a months-long affair

JOHN MACKAY
For Metro Canada

Puffiness! Breakouts! Bulges! If these are the nightmares that A-list actresses have on the nights leading up to the Oscars, they can be forgiven. They're only going to be seen by ... oh ... several hundred million people in 225 countries. No surprise that weeks, if not months, go into getting Oscar ready. Here's how it happens.

First, amass the troops. Have wardrobe stylist, tailor, hair stylist, makeup artist, dermatologist, aesthetician, nutritionist, personal trainer, massage therapist, manicurist and, since this is Hollywood, psychotherapist, scheduled and at the ready.

"The prepping can start months before the awards," says celebrity hair and makeup artist Sheri Stroh. "They'll get rolling with a diet and exercise protocol and meet with their stylist, who starts looking for the perfect dress."

Dermatologists and aestheticians, always on speed dial, come next, to perfect skin that's likely near perfect to begin with. But there's collagen to stimulate, pores to shrink and wrinkles to erase. Microdermabrasion, oxygen facials, LED light treatments and more — those high-definition cameras are merciless. And your Botox can always use a top-up.

Two weeks prior, get your hair cut and coloured. And how's your dress coming along? "It has to be the perfect dress that defines the celebrity's style," explains L.A. stylist Alissia Marciano.

By now you've picked out your dress — and your backup dress — and you've had more than one fitting. "Remember," Marciano says, "it has to fit you like a glove." Time to begin your juice fast. And schedule your spray tan.

The day's arrived, but don't worry, this is the easy part. Already carb-free and as cleansed, toned and taut as those three months of daily workouts will allow, do a little yoga to relax and then greet your team at the door. Try on your dress one last time. The tailor will cut and reshape it and can always sew you into the dress if need be.

While security men deliver the diamonds, let your hair stylist, makeup artist and manicurist get to work.

What to eat today? Nothing! Well, maybe a little bowl of detox soup, but please, no salt or caffeine, you don't want to bloat — there's only so much Spanx can do.

Finally, it's 4:30 p.m. in L.A. and your car is here. You're dressed, accessorized and made up, waiting while your stylist scrapes the bottom of your shoes with a knife — those red carpets can be slippery.

Get into the car oh-so-carefully and sit very still on your drive to Hollywood's Dolby Theatre. But relax! You'll be on and off that 500 feet of red carpet before you know it.

Stalingrad is an epic look at the battle that turned the tide of the Second World War. A band of determined Russian soldiers fight to hold a strategic building in their devastated city against a ruthless German army, and in the process become deeply connected to two Russian women who have been living there. Presented in IMAX 3D, the scale of the battle contrasts dramatically with the human drama.

Hidden within this Japanese pop-up book are temples, forests and lighthouses that rise beautifully from mechanical folds as you turn the pages. There's an adventurer travelling between them and it's up to you to open bridges and paths by pulling tabs and turning paper wheels. Intricate puzzles made of lanterns and bells somehow feel solid even as their clues are scrawled between the pages. It replaces story with Haiku, at a pace that is too slow, only finding its best rhythm during agile boat sequences. Hopefully, it's just the beginning. KRIS ABEL

3 songs for the weekend

SOUND CHECK
Alan Cross
scene@metronews.ca

These songs are interesting on their own, but they're best when paired with video.

Putin Will Teach You How to Love/ Pussy Riot

Here's the video Pussy Riot was making when they were set upon by whip-bearing Cossacks in Sochi during the Olympics. There will be blood.

Coming Home/ Kaiser Chiefs

Film fans will be interested in how this video was made with a single long tracking shot. How many takes did they need? The new album, Education, Education, Education & War will be out April 1.

But Blood/ Hockeysmith

Fuzzy, blurry and buzzy single featuring alternating voices from two sisters from Cornwall, England, who live together in a trailer somewhere. Intoxicating.

Shocked Pharrell ever so Happy as song hits No. 1

Calling Pharrell's current state, happy, might be an understatement.

The producer-rapper-singer's tune Happy is nominated for best original song at Sunday's Oscars. Days ahead, the upbeat anthem has climbed to No. 1 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart.

Pharrell says he's "ever so grateful" and "it's pretty crazy." The 40-year-old adds: "It's really awesome and I'm still shocked."

Happy is from the Despicable Me 2 soundtrack and will appear on Pharrell's new album, GIRL, out Monday. The hitmaker says he's prepping for his performance Sunday, and he "just intends to have fun with it." Pharrell also topped the Hot 100 chart as a featured act on Robin Thicke's Blurred Lines, Snoop Dogg's Drop It Like It's Hot and Ludacris' Money Maker. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Girls star Driver tipped to play new Stars Wars VII villain

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Some days, it's good to have a face like a handsome alien. Adam Driver, the Girls star who looks like the love child of sexy and weird, is putting those unconventional good looks to excellent use: He's close to signing a deal to play a villain in the upcoming Star Wars: Episode VII, according to Variety. Sources say his character will be in the vein of Darth Vader.

Apparently, the only holdup was his Girls shooting schedule, but surely Hannah and Marnie's Brooklynite fretting is no match for the power of the Force. Although breathless casting rumours have swirled around just about every Hollywood male since the J.J. Abrams-directed reboot was announced, nothing has been confirmed yet, including for Driver — not by the Star Wars people, anyhow. Driver's co-star and boss Lena Dunham seems pretty sure he's got the job.

"We're VERY proud of Adam Driver re: Star Wars. He's about to rip a hole in da force. Is that a thing? I guess I should see those movies?" she tweeted on Feb. 26.

OK, maybe she's not totally sure, because she followed that up with a second tweet: "I confirm nothing bc I know nothing bc I'm on a plane with my dad! I just like Adam more than almost anyone, and JJ Abrams a whole lot too." It's a good week for the Girls gang: another one of Driver's co-stars, Allison Williams, just got engaged to boyfriend Ricky Van Veen, who is a co-founder of the comedy website CollegeHumor.

Dalai Lama

Who's least likely to watch the Oscars? His Holiness the Dalai Lama

Sorry, Hollywood, but the Dalai Lama won't be watching you celebrate at the Academy Awards this weekend. The Tibetan spiritual leader admits to the Huffington Post that he hasn't watched a Hollywood film in a long, long time. "In the early period, yes, I watched films. Over the last 20 years, not much," he says. "Looking at the television, like that, I think it's really bad for my eyes. And also, it's a waste of time."

No Patton the back for Thicke after MTV grind

There was plenty of outrage about Robin Thicke and Miley Cyrus' aggressively sexual routine at the MTV Video Music Awards back in August, and apparently Paula Patton was among those put off by the grinding and gyrating.

A source tells Us Weekly that the risqué performance left Patton feeling "utterly disrespected" and was a key factor in her decision to separate from Thicke after nine years of marriage. In fact, the pair reportedly got into a screaming match over the stunt.

Arquette wants his son to be a space cadet, but that doesn't fly with mom-to-be

There's one name David Arquette's expectant girlfriend will not allow for their baby boy: Astro. Arquette and TV personality Christina McLarty have a baby due in May, and the actor offered up his choice of name, only to have it dismissed.

"I did want to name him Astro," Arquette said in a recent interview. The actor said he thought Astro Arquette was an amazing name. But, he said, it just "didn't fly" with McLarty. Arquette said his 10-year-old daughter Coco — with ex-wife Courtney Cox — is excited about the arrival of her baby brother. The actor said the one thing Coco is insisting is that the baby "absolutely worships" her.

He also said his daughter is already poised to follow in his parents' show business footsteps. "Coco loves acting herself and she loves the fact that we do what we do," said Arquette, who also pointed out that his daughter loves singing. "So, I think she's pretty much exactly how all of us on my side of the family were raised: in it essentially."

The actor's Emmy-winning sister, Patricia, said in a 2009 interview that their father, mother and grandparents were actors. She said growing up, she and her siblings, Rosanna, Alexis and Richmond were "constantly playing this kind of fantasy, role-playing, emotional games."

They did puppet shows and their parents taught them how to create stories. David Arquette spoke while promoting his TV movie Happy Face Killer about the hunt and capture of Canadian serial killer Keith Jesperson that airs on the Lifetime network on March 1.

The best wine goes to...

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

For the first time in years I can say I've seen most of the movies nominated for the Best Picture Oscar. Sadly, not one of them speaks to the wine community.

It looks like I'll have to wait until The Billionaire's Vinegar, the story of the world's most expensive bottle of wine, hits theatres. Brad Pitt is set to star.

If you're wondering what my favourite wine movies are, here are my top picks:

Sideways: The brilliant Academy Award winner that made pinot noir a superstar.

Bottle Shock: Upstart Americans take on the French in a sniff, swirl and spit contest that ... well, I won't ruin the ending.

A Good Year: Russell Crowe inherits a French winery in Provence and his ego gets crushed just like his grapes.

Somm: A doc that will have you shedding a tear at the trials and tribulations of becoming a sommelier.

For me, the Oscars are an appetizer event and the refreshing varietal fruit of the Fat Bastard 2012 Chardonnay ($13.46 - $15.99) makes for a food-friendly date to the big show. PRICES REFLECT RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

FAST, FRESH, SIMPLE
gustotv.com

1. Preheat oven to 140 C (275 F).

2. Place the lamb, vinegar, stock, rosemary, garlic and sugar in a deep baking dish and cover with a tight-fitting lid. Bake for 3 hours.

3. Turn lamb and bake further 2 hours. Remove the lid, increase temperature to 180 C (350 F) and bake for 30 minutes or until the lamb has browned.

Ingredients

- 1 kg lamb shoulder, on the bone
- 1 1/3 cups (310 ml) balsamic vinegar
- 3 cups (750 ml) chicken stock
- 6 sprigs rosemary
- 8 cloves garlic
- 2 tbsp brown sugar

Dessert

Standby Brownies

- 150 g butter
- 1 1/4 cups (275 g) caster (superfine) sugar
- 3/4 cup (75 g) cocoa
- 1 tsp vanilla extract
- 3 eggs
- 1/2 cup (75 g) plain (all-purpose) flour

Preheat oven to 160 C (325 F).

Place the butter, sugar and cocoa in a saucepan over low heat and stir until the butter has melted. Spoon into a bowl and add the vanilla and eggs, whisking well.

Sift the flour over the mixture and whisk to combine.

Spoon the mixture into a 20 cm-square cake tin lined with non-stick baking paper.

Bake for 30–35 minutes or until centre is just set. Cool in tin and cut into squares to serve. Makes 16. DONNA HAY, GUSTOTV.COM

Lunch. Caramelized Onion, Gorgonzola and Pumpkin Galette

Ingredients

- 450 g pumpkin, peeled and chopped
- 500 g store-bought short crust pastry
- 3/4 cup (240 g) store-bought caramelized onion relish
- 150 g gorgonzola, chopped
- sea salt and cracked pepper
- 16 sage leaves

1. Preheat oven to 200 C (400 F).

2. Steam the pumpkin until almost tender. Set aside to cool.

3. Divide pastry in half and roll each piece between 2 sheets of non-stick baking paper to a rough, 5 mm-thick round shape.

4. Line 2 baking trays with non-stick baking paper and place a pastry round on each. Top each pastry with the caramelized onion, leaving a 5 cm border. Sprinkle with Gorgonzola.

5. Place pumpkin onto galettes, sprinkle with salt and pepper and top with sage. Fold in the pastry to make a rough border. Bake 25 minutes or until pastry is golden and crisp and the pumpkin is soft.

Ex-Canucks owner ducking testimony

Steve Moore attack. Lawyer of former player wants John McCaw Jr. to testify if he encouraged Todd Bertuzzi's sucker-punch

The former owner of the Vancouver Canucks should be forced to answer, in front of a jury, if he approved a career-ending sucker punch on Steve Moore, a lawyer for the former NHL player argued in court Thursday.

It's now 10 years after Todd Bertuzzi's infamous hit, and Moore's multi-million-dollar lawsuit is finally approaching a trial. Moore's lawyer, Tim Danson, is asking the Ontario Superior Court to compel John McCaw Jr., who is based in Seattle, to testify in Toronto.

"He just goes on with his life with the incredible privileges of being a billionaire ... while Steve Moore tries to recover from a shattered life," Danson said in court Thursday.

"For him to say, 'I'm not going to come and testify in any capacity' is regrettable. It's regrettable and it defies principles of fairness and justice. For him to simply hide behind his U.S. citizenship and residency given the nature of all of these facts should not be accepted and it's not something the public would accept."

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman and deputy commissioner Bill Daly have voluntarily agreed to testify, Danson said.

Master Ronald Dash, who is hearing the motion, said he would not order McCaw to testify in person at the trial, slated to begin in September, but is considering Danson's alternate request that McCaw testify via video conference.

Rebuttals

Moore is suing Bertuzzi and the Canucks for $38 million for a 2004 on-ice hit that left Moore, then a Colorado Avalanche player, with a concussion and three fractured vertebrae.

- Moore had hit Markus Naslund weeks earlier, concussing the Canucks' captain.

MLB

Bautista already in flight for Jays

Jose Bautista kept up his torrid start to the spring, hitting two doubles and driving in two runs Thursday that sent the Toronto Blue Jays over the Philadelphia Phillies 7-5.

A day after hitting a long home run against the Phillies in his first at-bat of exhibition play, Bautista had an RBI double in the first inning off Philadelphia ace Cliff Lee.

Bautista finished 2-for-2 with a walk. The former two-time major-league homer champion missed the final six weeks last year because of a hip injury.

Jose Reyes, Brett Lawrie and Melky Cabrera also drove in runs for Toronto.

Darin Ruf and John Mayberry Jr. hit home runs for Philadelphia.

Blue Jays starter R.A. Dickey allowed one unearned run in two innings.

Jeter farewell tour begins with a dud

Derek Jeter got a partial standing ovation Thursday before hitting into a double play in his first at-bat of the first spring training game of his final season.

The New York Yankees captain, who turns 40 in June, hit a grounder to second off Pittsburgh right-hander Charlie Morton. He swung and missed once, hit three foul balls and grounded into a 4-6-3 double play on a 3-2 pitch.

Jeter grounded out to third on an 0-1 pitch against left-hander Jeff Locke in the fourth.

Letang unsure if he'll return this season

Kris Letang hasn't played for the Penguins since Jan. 27. He suffered a stroke two days later. BRUCE BENNETT/GETTY IMAGES

He's missed five games already, and defenceman Kris Letang isn't sure if he'll be back with the Pittsburgh Penguins this season.

The 26-year-old Montreal native suffered a stroke in January. Although the 2013 Norris Trophy finalist has resumed working out, he's non-committal about exactly when he'll be back on the ice playing for the Penguins.

"I'm going to say, it's not really a good season for me, not really lucky," Letang told reporters Thursday in his first availability since the stroke. "But honestly, if I have the chance to come back this year and play, it's going to be great and I want to make sure I forget all about the three quarters of the season I missed."

Quoted

"I woke up and my wife found me on the ground. The day before I was totally fine."

Kris Letang on the stroke he suffered on Jan. 29.

Letang will undergo more tests in about three weeks.

Doctors have monitored Letang since his stroke, meeting with him twice weekly. He's currently taking blood-thinners and will continue doing so for now.

Tests also showed Letang has a small hole in the wall of his heart, a condition all people have before they are born. But the hole eventually shuts for the vast majority of babies shortly after birth.

MLB. Braun doesn't wait long to display his brawn

Back from a lengthy suspension, Ryan Braun quickly displayed some power.

The slugger hit a two-run homer Thursday in his first at-bat for the Milwaukee Brewers since completing a season-ending, 65-game suspension in 2013 for violating Major League Baseball's anti-drug agreement.

In the first inning of Milwaukee's spring opener against Oakland, Braun hit an 0-1 pitch off Tommy Milone high over the wall near the left-field corner, 345 feet away. The 2011 NL MVP got a hearty round of cheers, the loudest coming from fans in the dozen rows or so behind the Brewers bench at Phoenix Municipal Stadium, the spring home of the Athletics.

"It's still the first day of spring training. Better to hit the ball hard then to strike out," Braun said. "The goal is to have a gradual progression to prepare myself for the season."

One that promises to have its share of hecklers for Braun, at least at the start. Just before the homer, one fan wearing an A's hat yelled "MVP-E-D."

Ryan Braun GETTY IMAGES

Braun took it in stride.

"I've never experienced them not yelling at me," he said. "They have some new things to yell at me for, to yell at me about."

It was Braun's first game in the Brewers' lineup since July 21, 2013. The five-time all-star accepted a 65-game penalty the next day for his involvement with Biogenesis, a Florida clinic accused of distributing performance-enhancing drugs.

PGA. Tiger's struggles continue at Honda Classic

Zach Johnson made a quadruple-bogey 8 on his second hole and still managed a 67 in the Honda Classic on Thursday.

Tiger Woods had good birdie chances on his opening four holes and couldn't break par.

Johnson made seven birdies after his soggy start — two straight shots into the water. He looked as though he might have shot himself out of the tournament, but he ended the round two shots behind co-leaders William McGirt and Rory Sabbatini among the early starters. Woods was playing for the first time in a month — and only his third tournament this year — and he didn't show many signs of rounding into form.

Number issue with Collins in Denver

NBA. Nets centre wearing jersey in honour of slain gay college student

Deron Williams took a moment to snap a few photos of Brooklyn teammate Jason Collins at their shootaround in Portland.

He couldn't help it: The NBA's first openly gay player was surrounded by a throng of cameras and microphones, and at least for the next week or so, Collins will be the face of the Nets wherever they go.

The seven-footer was signed to a 10-day contract on Sunday. He played in a 108-102 victory over the Lakers that night, with two rebounds, five fouls and a steal in just under 11 minutes.

Before Wednesday night's game against the Trail Blazers, Collins said he accepted both the interest and scrutiny that has come with his return to the league.

The family of Matthew Shepard will be looking on at the Pepsi Center in Denver on Thursday as the NBA's first openly gay player Jason Collins, right, and the Brooklyn Nets play the Nuggets. MARK J. TERRILL/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I'm back playing basketball, so of course I'm enjoying this," he said.

Collins quietly played seven minutes in the 124-80 loss to the Blazers on Wednesday night, entering after Nets coach Jason Kidd had pulled his starters in the fourth quarter and many of the fans had already headed for the exits. He attempted one field goal.

After Portland, the Nets visit Denver, where the family of slain Wyoming college student Matthew Shepard were expected to make the drive for the game Thursday night against the Nuggets.

Shepard was tortured and murdered in 1998 because he was gay. Collins wears his No. 98 jersey in Shepard's honour. He wants to keep the details of any meeting with Judy Shepard to himself.

"Obviously, it's extremely special and I'm very much looking forward to meeting them," he said.

Collins wore the No. 98 with both the Boston Celtics and the Washington Wizards for Shepard even before coming out.

"We were very touched," Judy Shepard told the New York Daily News about the jersey. "For him to make that tribute to Matt was meaningful to us."

The jersey was already the biggest seller of the day Tuesday on NBAStore.com, and the NBA said it was selling well again Wednesday. The league didn't provide the number of jerseys sold.

Collins publicly announced he was gay last May, and he joins several other athletes to come out, including Robbie Roberts of Major League Soccer's Los Angeles Galaxy, Brittney Griner of the WNBA's Phoenix Mercury, and NFL draft hopeful Michael Sam, an All-American defensive end who played at Missouri.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
As mind planet Mercury moves in your favour again today your attitude will change for the better and you will be more upbeat about your hopes. Anything is possible if you want it enough.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Keep telling yourself that you have what it takes. If you say it enough, you will start to believe it and when that happens, all sorts of doors will suddenly open to you.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
If you have something to say you know isn't going to please some people, say it now. Don't worry about the consequences. Your job is to call it as you see it, and you see more clearly than most.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Be on the lookout for money-making opportunities but don't go rushing after them the moment you spot them. As Mercury, planet of intellect and communication, turns direct again today you can afford to take your time.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
A loved one will speak their mind today and what they have to say will shock you. You never realized they could be so passionate, or so angry. Well, now you know, so what are you going to do about it?

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
As of today you should find it easier to organize your daily routine and either get rid of or delegate jobs that take up a great deal of your time for very little in the way of rewards.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
News you receive from afar will make you realize that what you've been worrying about in recent weeks is of no real importance. Creatively and romantically, seize the initiative and make things happen.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
It may annoy you that someone is saying untrue things. But the best approach is to pretend that you have not noticed and that you agree with every word they say. Then prove them wrong.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Now that Mercury, planet of communication, is moving in your favour again, you will find it easy to express yourself. But don't let everyone know what is going on in your head.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
What seems extraordinary to you may be an everyday occurrence to other people, so let your mind be open to all possibilities. It doesn't, of course, mean you have to agree with them.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Any self-doubts you have will start to fade today and with luck will be swept away by tomorrow's new moon. People expect you to be positive in your views and don't want to disappoint them.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Mercury ends its retrograde phase and your self-belief will soar. With a new moon and a wonderful Sun-Jupiter link over the next 48 hours, this could be one of the best weekends of the year. SALLY BROMPTON

*All payments are based with a $1,500 down payment or equivalent trade in value. Payments are bi-weekly using 5.99% APR OAC. Payments are calculated based on 60/72/84 month terms. Prices are plus applicable taxes. Dealer installed options are not included. (1) 2.99% financing is for one year and calculated as follows: The total cost of interest is calculated for the entire period of the loan, to a max of 72 months, the total interest is divided into a per monthly interest cost and then multiplied by 12 months. The customer then has the choice to lower the selling price by this amount or receive a cheque for the calculated portion. The minimum amount to finance is $11,000. The customer must be approved through Tricor Lease and Finance (TLFC) at a 4.49% APR. On select models. Photos are for illustration only. Some conditions may apply to the above programs. All offers are OAC. See dealer for complete details. WE DO NOT CHARGE ADMIN FEES! DL#916407
